Write life, leave your mark, and sculpt every word in existence, with the solid silver body of the Pilot Silver pen and its etched artwork. Add colour using iroshizuku inks.

ETCHING

A secular technique

Etching has been a distinct art since the Middle Ages. This ancestral technique was once practiced as much as painting and sculpture.

Silver pens by Pilot are the genuine objects of art, elaborated in the greatest respect of aquafortist tradition.

The pattern is first printed on the pen using a masking ink. It is then submerged in an etching bath that “eats away” unprotected zones to bring out the pattern.

Lastly, the pen is soaked in fresh water, and polished to reveal the shiny silver and highly precise engraving.

A close-up, low-angle shot of a fountain pen nib, likely a Pilot, resting on a light blue surface. The nib is dark and polished, with the brand name 'PILOT' and '18K' visible. The background is softly blurred, showing other pens and a blue object.

Silver series, a tribute to tradition, words and emotions.
Nobility and power united in a line of 4 solid silver models, like objects of art, adorned with a rhodium-plated 18K gold nib.
